

Work-Life Balance and Psychological Safety

Human Resource Department

AMNEX INFOTECHNOLOGIES PVT. LTD.

The Company is committed to a work environment that supports employee well-being, sustains a healthy balance between work and personal life, and fosters psychological safety where employees feel safe to speak up, ask questions, raise concerns, and acknowledge mistakes without fear of blame or retaliation.

The Company recognises that a healthy, supportive workplace is essential to sustained performance, innovation, and employee retention.

Scope:

This Policy applies to all employees of the Company across all locations and working arrangements, including office locations, project sites, remote and hybrid working arrangements, business travel, and work-related events. The principles of this Policy may also be extended, wherever reasonably practicable, to interns, consultants, contractors, and other individuals working with or on behalf of the Company.

Definitions:

For the purposes of this Policy:

work-life balance means a sustainable relationship between an employee's professional responsibilities and personal life, where neither is routinely sacrificed for the other;

psychological safety means a workplace climate in which individuals feel safe to express opinions, ask questions, report errors, challenge ideas constructively, and raise concerns without fear of humiliation, punishment, marginalisation, or retaliation; well-being means the overall condition of an employee as it relates to the physical, mental, and emotional aspects of the workplace and work experience.

Work-Life Balance and Employee Well-Being:

- The Company recognises that sustainable performance requires appropriate consideration of workload, working hours, rest, and personal commitments, and seeks to foster workplace conditions that support employee well-being.
- In cases of legitimate business emergencies, critical operational requirements, or client commitments, employees and managers are expected to work together constructively to meet such requirements while maintaining the principles set out in this Policy.
- Employees are encouraged to make appropriate use of available leave, flexible working arrangements, and Company-provided support resources.
- Where an employee requires reasonable workplace support because of health-related circumstances, disability, personal circumstances, or other legitimate needs, appropriate adjustments, based on the nature of the role, may be discussed and agreed between the employee, the Reporting Manager, and the HR Business Partner.
- Such adjustments may include modified schedules, workload reprioritisation, temporary flexibility, or phased return to work.
- At any point, if an employee is struggling to maintain work-life balance, the employee should raise the matter with the Reporting Manager or the HRBP at the earliest opportunity so that appropriate support can be arranged.
- This Policy guides day-to-day working practices. In cases of legitimate business emergencies, critical operational requirements, or client commitments, employees and managers are expected to work together constructively to meet such requirements while maintaining the principles set out in this Policy

Psychological Safety:

- The Company seeks to maintain an environment in which employees can:
 - ask questions and seek clarification;
 - express differing views and challenge ideas or decisions constructively;
 - report errors, near misses, or compliance and safety concerns;
 - provide and receive constructive feedback; and
 - acknowledge mistakes and learn from them, without fear of humiliation, unfair treatment, or retaliation for raising the matter in good faith.

- The Company encourages healthy, respectful dialogue including constructive disagreement as part of a safe and accountable workplace.
- The following patterns may indicate a psychologically unsafe environment and should be identified and addressed:
 - publicly ridiculing, belittling, or humiliating colleagues for asking questions, raising concerns, or making honest mistakes;
 - penalising or marginalising an employee for respectfully disagreeing or raising a genuine concern;
 - withholding information, opportunities, or recognition as retaliation for speaking up;
 - creating a climate of intimidation, fear, or excessive control that prevents employees from contributing or reporting issues;
 - using threats or personal attacks as a means of managing performance or obtaining compliance.
- Where conduct falls within the scope of the Workplace Harassment and Violence Policy, POSH Policy, or another applicable policy or legal process, the matter will be addressed through the relevant mechanism.

Manager Responsibilities:

Managers play an important role in creating a healthy, respectful, and psychologically safe working environment. Managers are expected to:

- allocate work fairly, set realistic priorities and timelines, and provide reasonable advance notice of significant changes wherever practicable;
- ensure employees have reasonable clarity regarding their responsibilities, priorities, authority, reporting relationships and performance expectations;
- remain attentive to signs of sustained or unreasonable stress within their teams, consider appropriate interventions, and involve the HRBP where needed to uphold work-life balance and psychological safety;
- where an employee's concerns appear to involve health or personal well-being, guide the employee to the HRBP or appropriate professional resources rather than attempting to assess or address the matter themselves;
- avoid normalising excessive overtime or unnecessary after-hours communication;
- respect applicable working hours, leave, and approved flexible working arrangements, and not discourage employees from appropriately using them;
- create an environment in which employees can speak up, disagree respectfully, and raise concerns,
- address patterns of behaviour or workplace conflict that may undermine psychological safety;
- maintain appropriate confidentiality when employees raise sensitive concerns;
- not request or collect personal health information unless required for a legitimate workplace purpose and in accordance with applicable Company processes;

- provide reasonable advance notice of significant changes in priorities or work requirements wherever practicable;
- lead by example in maintaining sustainable working practices.

Employee Responsibilities:

Employees are expected to contribute actively to a healthy and respectful workplace. Employees should:

- manage their workload proactively and communicate early where they anticipate difficulty meeting deadlines or managing competing priorities;
- seek clarification where priorities or responsibilities are unclear;
- treat colleagues with dignity and respect, and contribute constructively to discussions and disagreements;
- raise genuine workplace, safety, compliance, or behavioural concerns through appropriate channels; and
- refrain from behaviour that intimidates, humiliates, marginalises, or deliberately silences others.

Reporting:

Employees may raise concerns relating to work-life balance, psychological safety, or well-being through the Reporting Manager or the HRBP.

Where a concern falls within the scope of another Company policy or statutory process, it will be referred through the applicable process.

Non-Compliance:

Conduct inconsistent with this Policy may be addressed through appropriate corrective measures. Depending on the nature, frequency, and seriousness of the conduct, actions may include counselling or guidance, managerial intervention, corrective action, formal investigation, or disciplinary action in accordance with the Company's Disciplinary Policy.
